Decoration Day passed off pleasantly. The exercises were as usual very appropriate, and the address by V. A. Bullard, one of our Lamolite county boys, but now one of Burlington's representative lawyers, was a good one, full of patriotism and practical thoughts.

Hon. S. A. Andrews, who has been seriously ill during the past week, is improving. There are not many men of Mr. Andrews' age who have the health record which he has. When the physician was called last Thursday, May 23, it was for the first time in his life of sixty years. If all men were like him what would the doctors do?

Mrs. T. A. Waterman met with a very serious accident last Sunday while out driving with her sister, Mrs. Marshall. They were coming down the hill near Geo. Atwell's house when the horse stumbled and fell, this threw both ladies out of the carriage. Mrs. Waterman fell on her knee, breaking the ligaments and bruising it very badly. The horse then ran and hitting the carriage against a post, breaking both thighs. He then ran home frightening the family very much.

A MATTER OF HEALTH

in-law, Norman Waterman and Millard Batchelder, and brother-in-law, Geo. Smith. Mr. Magoon was one of the old veterans in the Civil War, being a member of the 11th Regiment, Vermont Vol. He was a kind and obliging neighbor, a quiet good citizen and will be much missed.

The Memorial service in the Opera Hall was of more than ordinary interest. The attendance was large although the number of veterans was noticeably smaller, there being only 17 present. Three of the number, Frank Stearns, V. A. Patch and Wilder Magoon, have passed to the other side since the last Memorial Service. The music, in charge of Prin. E. D. Collins, was very fine. The pieces rendered were "Angel of Peace," "My Country 'Tis of Thee," and "Battle Hymn of the Republic." The sermon by Rev. H. C. Leach was of unusual interest. The subject, "Emancipators" being especially appropriate. He began with Moses, the emancipator of the Hebrew children, and went on down the line of the world's great liberators paying special tribute to the noble Lincoln, and leading up to the greatest of all, Jesus Christ.

Two little playmates, a boy of five and a girl of four, living on Lower Main street have admired the numerous bonfires which have been kindled in the gardens and back yards of the houses on that street for the purpose of getting rid of rubbish, and determined to have one of their own. So on Monday afternoon they put some hay and shavings and other litter into a box in a stall of L. W. Fletcher's new barn, and the boy finding in his pocket some matches (do matches grow spontaneously in a boy's pockets?) proceeded to light a fire. Fortunately Mrs. Wareham, the next neighbor, happened to come out of her backdoor just then with a pail of water to turn on her plants, and seeing smoke pour out of the barn windows went over just in time to prevent the fire from reaching the hay in the upper part of the barn. Those two children both know better than to set bonfires in barns now.
